

Forward
TOGETHER
in Faith

As Networks

“My vision for networking would be that we all realize our need for one another, and that we each have something to give, and to receive.” – Pastor Violet Little, Welcome Church

When our resources are constrained, innovative ministry often results from networking and collaboration.

Our Synod’s new mission starts are partnerships between people with a vision and passion for a different type of ministry, the Synod and the ELCA. “When we came to the Synod with the idea of Rhawnhurst Turning Point they were excited about something that was a little outside of the box,” says director Cheryl Lafferty.

Networks including our hunger team and youth ministry leaders bring together people from across the Synod to achieve big goals. Congregations create partnerships, too.

Resurrection, Yardley has collaborated with ecumenical and interfaith partners, and community groups to address hunger in Lower Bucks County. Welcome Threads draws on Welcome Church, local artists, and a university business school to help persons in homelessness learn to create and market their own wares.

“We’ll be able to connect folks from across the Synod to share their ideas and pool their talents,” says Dan Scharnhorst, director of Bear Creek Camp.

Forward Together in Faith will help our Synod and congregations’ vision and capacity to build networks to share God’s love and care in our communities.

Forward
TOGETHER
in Faith

As Networks

“My vision for networking would be that we all realize our need for one another, and that we each have something to give, and to receive.” – Pastor Violet Little, Welcome Church

When our resources are constrained, innovative ministry often results from networking and collaboration.

Our Synod’s new mission starts are partnerships between people with a vision and passion for a different type of ministry, the Synod and the ELCA. “When we came to the Synod with the idea of Rhawnhurst Turning Point they were excited about something that was a little outside of the box,” says director Cheryl Lafferty.

Networks including our hunger team and youth ministry leaders bring together people from across the Synod to achieve big goals. Congregations create partnerships, too.

Resurrection, Yardley has collaborated with ecumenical and interfaith partners, and community groups to address hunger in Lower Bucks County. Welcome Threads draws on Welcome Church, local artists, and a university business school to help persons in homelessness learn to create and market their own wares.

“We’ll be able to connect folks from across the Synod to share their ideas and pool their talents,” says Dan Scharnhorst, director of Bear Creek Camp.

Forward Together in Faith will help our Synod and congregations’ vision and capacity to build networks to share God’s love and care in our communities.